UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC-BEST)

A collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences, offering undergraduate science majors an opportunity to become high school science teachers

“I graduated from UNC in 2006 with a B.S. in physics. I chose to go into education because, whatever I’ve thought about doing, I’ve wanted to affect the lives of the people around me. I’ve had a few Zen moments when I’ve realized that teaching has been my toughest, but also my most rewarding, experience to date.”

“I was born and raised in Puerto Rico. At age 17, I moved to New York to attend Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, where I received a bachelor’s degree in Mechanical Engineering. However, after a summer of teaching underprivileged students in Washington, D.C., I realized that teaching was my passion.”
